Diana Is Expecting a Baby

LONDON - Diana, Princess of Wales, is expecting a baby in June, Buckingham Palace announced Thursday. The child will automatically become next in line to the throne after Prince Charles, whom Diana married on July 29. The haby's title, if named David or Elizabeth, for example, will be "Prince David of Wales" or "Princess Elizabeth of Wales."

"The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh are absolutely delighted, as are members of the princess's family," the palace said.

The expectant mother, formerly Lady Diana Spencer, made her first state appearance Wednesday at the formal opening of Parliament. She is in "excellent health," the palace said. The palace said she would continue most of ber public functions but regretted that she would have to cancel others as ber pregnancy advances.

Diana, 20, and Charles, 32, attended a lord mayor's luncheon at the Guildhall, city hall of the City of London, hours after the announcement. The earl's daughter and former kindergarten teacher smiled and waved to well-wishers.

Buckingham Palace did oot say where the baby will be born. The prince and princess have been settling into their country home, Highgrove, 113 miles (about 181 kilometers) west of London, and have been assigned an apartment in Kensington Palace in London, where Princess Margaret also lives.

Betting immediately started on whether the baby will be a boy girl. London bookmakers offered slight odds in favor of a boy and 50-1 against twins.

Sharon Declares Israel Plans New Settlements

United Press I JERUSALEM - Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said Thursday that Israel will respond to the Saudi Arabian Middle East peace plan by establishing more settlements in occupied Arab territory. Speaking at a ceremony marking the establishment of a paramilitary settlement in the Hebron hills, Mr. Sharon said: "Our answer to the eight points of the Saudi plan is eight Israeli settlements."

Sandi Comments

Mr. Sharon said, however, that Israel will pursue the current Middle East peace process despite U.S. contemplation of alternative plans to the Camp David pact. In Riyadh, meantime, Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud al-Faisal said Thursday that Israel and the Arabs must recognize "each others' rights" if peace is to be achieved in the Middle East. # Sweden to Release Sub, Reports Russian Vessel May Carry A-Weaponry

STOCKHOLM - The Soviet submarine that went aground in a restricted area near a Swedish Navy base probably was armed with nuclear weapons and probably was on an illegal mission. Pre-mier Thorbjorn Falldin said

Thursday.

But the premier, who had received a report from Defense Agency officials about the incident, said Sweden would release the submarine because the Foreign Affairs Committee of parliament had agreed that nothing could be gained by holding the vessel.

"The violation was bad enough, but worse is the fact that the submarine most likely carried nuclear warheads, according to our investi-gation," Mr. Falldin said at a news conference.

"Our investigation revealed uranium-238 aboard the submarine. There is no other reasonable explanadon. This is the most blatant viin Sweden since World War II. Measures have been taken to escort the submarine out to international waters to the Soviet naval forces. This will be carried out as soon as the weather permits."

Stormy weather with 45 mpb wind gusts prevented the depar-ture. Swedish officers said it would be least daytime Friday before the boat could leave.

Mr. Falldin quoted Swedish officials as saying that the uranium did not pose a threat to the population in the area.

He said a report by Swedish investigators said that the Swedish military at an early phase of the incident registered radiation from the outside of the submarine. Further measurements confirmed that it came from the torpedo hold and was from U-238, which is used in

Close Tanaka Associate Convicted In Japan's Lockheed Bribery Case

By Tracy Dahlby Washington Post Service

TOKYO - In a mounting political drama, a Tokyo district court Thursday sentenced billionaire businessman Kenji Osano, a longtime associate of former Premier Kakuei Tanaka, to a year in prison for his role in the five-year-old Lockheed bribery scandal. In separate court proceedings,

Mr. Tanaka is accused of accepting a $2.2-million bribe for allegedly influencing the sales in Ja-pan of Lockheed TriStar passenger ets. Mr. Osano's conviction in the long-running case was seen as a setback for the former premier's own defense and a blow to his political fortunes.

In handing down the court's decision, Judge Koichi Hanya found Mr. Osano, 64, guilty on three counts of perjury committed in 1976 during bearings in the Japanese Diet to investigate the Lockheed payoffs, which were brought to light in U.S. Senate subcommittee bearings in February of that year. It was Mr. Osano, prosecutors have alleged, who, in 1972, acted on Mr. Tanaka's direct orders to press officials of Nippon Airways, Japan's largest domestic airline, to buy the Lockheed TriStars.

Has Denied Charges

Throughout his lengthy trial, which began in January, 1977, and is likely to run for many more months. Mr. Tanaka has denied charges that be used his political office to promote the aircraft sales or that he accepted money for his alleged efforts.

But knowledgeable observers said that Thursday's verdict against Mr. Osano, the first court ruling involving a major figure in the Lockheed case, brought pro-secutors a step closer to establishing the link between the tycoon and the former premier.

After coming to office in 1972, Mr. Tanaka was forced to resign two years later after reports in the Japanese press that be had used political funds to enhance his private finances. In July, 1976, be was arrested on charges that be had accepted money from Marubeni, the Japanese trading company that had acted as Lockheed's agent in promoting aircraft sales in Japan.

Ironically, the controversy around Mr. Tanaka appeared to have done little, if any, damage to his actual political power. Today. at 63, he is still the dominant figure among Japan's ruling Liberal Democrats despite the fact that he was forced to give up party mem-bership in disgrace following his indictment in the Lockheed case.

Powerful Faction

With at least 107 members, the faction of Liberal Democrats that still bears Mr. Tanaka's name is by far the largest such grouping in the Diet and gives the former premier behind-the-scenes clout in the country's legislative affairs.

It is widely believed among po-litical analysis here that Mr. Tanaka, confident of an acquittal in the Lockbeed case, bas beeo maneuvering through his loyal lieutenants to regain his old office once Premier Zenko Suzuki steps down. But those efforts, sources said, have suffered a serious setback as the result of the Osano conviction.

The sharpest jolt to Mr. Tanaka's court defense - and his political ambitions - came last week, however, when prosecutors called ness. Mrs. Enomoto, 33, testified that her former husband, Toshio. Mr. Tanaka's former personal sec-retary, told her he had accepted the Lockheed payoff on behalf of Mr. Tanaka from a Marubeni offi-

Throughout the trial, in which he is Mr. Tanaka's co-defendant, Mr. Enomoto has denied prosecutors' claims that he accepted the money in four cash installments. Mr. Tanaka's team of defense attorneys have mustered a battery of witnesses in a bid to prove that Mr. Enomoto was otherwise engaged when the payments were allegedly made, Mrs. Enomoto's testimony represented the first serious challenge to that defense.

Should the verdict go against Mr. Tanaka, his attorneys have indicated that they plan to stage a lengthy appeal process in a higher COULT

But the recent adverse developments for Mr. Tanaka's defense have prompted Liberal Democrats to begin thinking the unthinkable and could, political analysts said, touch off a grab for power among leading party members who have so far been forced to defer to his formidable organizacion.

"Until now, politicians haven't been able to imagine that a man like Tanaka might actually be convicted because there has never been a case like it in Japanese history." said Takashi Tachibana, the writer who first exposed Mr. Tanakak's financial dealings eight years ago. "Bin now they find they bave to start thinking about it."

RABAT, Morocco — A highlevel U.S. military team has arrived in Morocco against a back-ground of intensified appeals from King Hassao II for in-creased U.S. support in his war against Libyan-backed guerrillas in the former Spanish Sahara.

Morocco's Claim

The Guelta Zemmour setback was described by a diplomat here as a "very cold shower indeed" for Hassan's efforts to bring the six-year-old Sahara conflict to an internationally acceptable end without abandoning Morocco's claim to the disputed territory.

In the battle, Moroccan anthorities report, the Polisario guerrillas for the first time used Soviet-made T-54 tanks and sophisticated ground-to-air missiles that escalated the conflict to a dangerous new level.

As a result, Morocco's request for more military help from the United States centers on equipment to permit Hassao's Saharan forces to reconnoiter the region without being exposed to the danger of being shot down by Polisano missiles or anti-aircraft fire.

Moroccan and foreign press reports have spoken of the possi-ble use of the U.S. Air Warning and Control System radar planes such as those dispatched to Egypt and sold to Saudi Arabia. Other sources dismiss the reports as wishful thinking, however, saying the Moroccan request has out progressed to such specifics and that, in any case, the AWACS are unlikely to be part of the U.S. response. At the same time, the Reagan administration appears determined to include Morocco on the list of U.S. friends who must receive concrete demonstrations of support in the face of Libyan pressure in northern Africa and uncertainty following the assas-sination of Sadat in Egypt.

The new U.S. ambassador in Rabat, Joseph Verner Reed Jr., is known to be particularly eager to increase U.S. support for the king's military struggle in the Sahara and his economic struggle in the drought-stricken Moroccan countryside. Apparently with these visits in

The causes for the uncer-tainty have been the deterioration of the economic outlook, which means a prospect of lower future revenues, and the resistance in Republican congressional ranks to accepting the budget cuts.

Further friction between Congress and the president is expected when Mr. Reagan submits his proposals for tightening up on indi-vidual benefits, or entitlements, and for achieving a $21-billion cut in the use of U.S. government loan

Friction Over Cuts

The cut list on loan guarantees was to be published Wednesday but was pulled back by the White House at the last minute without explanation. There has been much friction over these cuts within the executive branch and between the administration and Congress.

One indication of White House discomfort came in the disclosure by a high administration official that estimates of economic growth in 1982 range from 0 to 2 percent. That range, especially the lower end, is quite different from the 3.4 percent growth rate predicted July 15 in the formal midyear budget

Similarly, administration offi-cials said the range of probable budget deficits in fiscal 1984, which ends Sept. 30, 1984, was $40 billion to $110 billion, with $150 billion an outside figure from the Office of Management and Budget that Treasury officials regarded as

Participants in the 45-minute meeting of the so-called "four wise men" with the president and his senior economic aides said the four were fully agreed on two points — that the 1981 tax cuts should not be modified or delayed and that a sustained effort to shrink spending was the best long-term strategy for steady reduction of the budget def-icit.

WASHINGTON — Congress may disrupt the NATO plan to deploy new U.S. long-range theater missiles in Western Europe by refusing to approve enough money this year to begin production of the nuclear warhead for the mis-

Members of both houses have become critical of the program because of its sharply escalating costs, the problems of pushing its development to make its deployment date in December, 1983, and growing sentiment in Europe against acceptance of the weapons. Although the Senate was expected to approve full funding of the Reagan administration's plan for the Cruise missile's nuclear warhead, congressional sources said it was doubtful there will be any reconciliation with the House before funds run out Nov. 20.

Thereafter, sources said, the en-tire Department of Energy nuclear weapon building program may have to proceed under a continu-ing resolution that would provide funds at the lowest level approved by either congressional body.

Several other nuclear weapons programs meant primarily for European deployments also stand to be affected.

The House cut $35 million earmarked for the initiation of production of a new nuclear artiflery shell for the 155mm gun. This program was part of a 1977 NATO buildup, pushed by the United States, to increase and modernize nuclear artillery in Europe.

More Analysis Urged

The House Appropriations Committee said that given the de-cision to go ahead with the new. eight-inch neutron artillery shell, moving ahead with a new 155mm shell was "premature" and "additional analysis of the requirement for this capability is warranted."

The Senate Wednesday restored those funds, along with $1.2 mil-lion to improve the electrical safe-ty system on the old Nike Hercules nuclear warhead.

The House had cot that item, saying, "This weapons system is approaching obsolescence" and plans should be made "to remove it from the inventory as rapidly as

Republicans claimed a governorship in New Jersey to offset the one they lost in Virginia and then joined the Democrats and a host of other observers in reading more meaning into the returns than was evident to the naked eve.

Mr. Manatt's last point was endorsed by Richard Richards, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who said that "the performance of the candidate was para-mount" in such high-visibility and highspending races as the two governorships. "Coattails and party labels" are probably more important in legislative races, he said. claiming that national party advertising and organization work helped the GOP pick up five seats in the New Jersey Assembly and eight in the Virginia House of Delegates.

Importance Unclear

Actually, the importance of Reagan's coattails and national party efforts was unclear in both states. Rep. Florio told reporters, "I underestimated the influence of the president," when he chose to focus the closing phase of his campaign on attacking Mr.

Reagan's budget cuts.

But Republican strategists said they decided to pull the Reagan endorsement ad of Mr. Kean off the air in the final week despite polls showing the president's 57 percent approval rating - because they wanted to concentrate on the more profitable theme of "time for a change" from two decades of almost unbroken Democratic rule in Tren-

Mr. Richards said the Virginia outcome carried a warning that "any Republican runming in an area with a substantial black vote stands in jeopardy of being defeated by the black vote." ### 25 Years After Hungary

The reason why people routinely ask whether the Soviet Union will invade Poland is 25 years old this week. The reason is the invasion of Hungary in 1956.

A generation has passed since Soviet tanks roared into Budapest and crushed the first general uprising against Stalinist misrule in Eastern Europe. But that stirring revolt, the defections of Hungarian soldiers and the treachery of the Soviet attack are not mere chapters in history. They are events that defined East European politics and much East-West diplomacy for a quarter-century.

Moscow learned in 1956 that its domination of Eastern Europe would always require the Red Army. It revealed itself unwilling to accept even Marxist reform. And it demonstrated that the West would not risk war to resist such Soviet domination. Thus was born the impulse that suppressed Czechoslovakia's rebellion in 1968 and produced the Brezhnev doctrine of indefinite Soviet title to Eastern Europe.

But it has been more than a generation of revolt and repression. Hungary found a more devious path toward a more humane form of dictatorship. Romania wriggled free of many Soviet economic and diplomatic restraints. East Germany acquiesces in tight rule but has gradually tolerated more civilized ties with West Germany. And Poland, always seething with dissent and anti-Soviet feeling, has now invented an entirely new kind of challenge, all the more alarming to the Kremlin because it is throwing up leaders outside the Communist fold.

Nationalisms are sprouting also in Westem Europe, but they are no kinder to Communists. East and West, the trends run toward freedom. And one great stimulus has been the periodic easing of tensions between the United States and Soviet Union, When Eastern Europe is allowed to relax from the confrontations of the nuclear giants, it not only breathes easy but dreams boldly.

If there remains a chance of saving Poland from Hungary's fate, it lies in the web of dependencies that fitful détente created -Soviet and Polish dependence on Western loans and trade; West German longings for family ties in the East; American yearnings to sell the Russians grain. Others may see détente as dangerous, but Eastern Europeans know how to exploit it. Their nationalisms and indigenous socialisms are durable forces, tragically suppressed in Hungary 25 years ago but in no sense destroyed.

Post-Election Haruspicy

Haruspicy, as the ancients practiced it, is interpreting the world by examining the entrails of sacrificial animals. When it comes to the modern political equivalent, sometimes it's no trick at all. Last year all the signs seemed to point, in neon, in one direction: less government, taxes, inflation. There is no such electric lesson this year. If anything, the results suggest that American politics is in fact more ambiguous than the neon of 1980. Consider a few contradictory examples.

 Report Card on Reaganomics — Some people thought the gubernatorial races in New Jersey and Virginia would constitute a referendum on Ronald Reagan's performance so far. And if both Republicans had won, the White House trumpets doubtless would already be heralding a Historic Realignment of parties.

But in truth, national politics may not have figured much in either race. That Charles Robb won for the Democrats in Virginia, where the Republican tied himself closely to the president, is hardly a sign that voters condemn Mr. Reagan's program. Neither would it show approval of the program if Tom Kean winds up winning for the Republicans in New Jersey; he kept his distance from the president.

Voters in the New York region may in fact have rendered an economic report card but on ballot questions, and not in any way that suggests weariness with government spending. By almost 2-to-1, New Jersey voters approved $500 million worth of bonds to deal with water supply, toxic waste and farmland preservation. New York voters agreed, by a 3-to-2 margin, to reverse two previous referendums and to double the bonding authority of the Job Development Authority. And, by a hair, they approved $500 million for prison construction.

• The Mayor and the Minorities — That Mayor Koch won in a landslide was hardly a surprise; he had the nominations of both parties in a city where only the Democratic label is needed to win. What is noteworthy, however, is the return of black and Hispanic voters. who had sourned him in the primary. Why? One answer is that minorities don't dislike him so much that they are willing to abandon the Democratic Party.

• The Apathetic Electorate - Voters don't care any more: That has become a standard proposition of recent elections. Only half of them register, and only half of those bother to vote. That was true in New York City's unexciting contests; the turnout was only 46 percent. Yet in New Jersey the turnout exceeded 62 percent, the highest

The contradictions don't stop at the election returns. The Gallup Poll provides another one. Traditionally, when Americans are asked which is the party of prosperity, they say the Democrats; the Republicans, they have said, are the party of peace. Now there's been a reversal of image: Republicans are called the prosperity party, 40 percent to 31, and Democrats the peace party, 34 to 29.

That may be an anomaly, too. But anomaly offers its own lesson. There has been a lot of certainty expressed since the last election about how hard the country is turning right. The truth, it appears, is more complicated.

Teamsters and Pensions

For more than 20 years the Teamsters' pension fund has been investigated by one government agency or another. In the process, it has acquired special importance as a symbol of union racketeering and corruption and as a prime example of the difficulties of preventing and rectifying pension fund mismanagement.

Last week Labor Secretary Ray Donovan appeared before the Senate's permanent subcommittee on investigations to report on his department's probe of the Teamsters' fund. He supported legislation to stiffen penalties for labor corruption - measures also endorsed by the AFL-CIO chief, Lane Kirkland - and pledged vigorous pursuit of both civil and criminal allegations. Any effort to speed up resolution of the Teamster fund matter is certainly welcome. Miracles, however, should not be expected.

Resolving the Teamster pension matter is important, but it will leave open the larger question of pension protection. The Teamster case is the most prominent but not the only case of possible abuse by corporate or union trustees. Policing every pension fund of any size would require an army of investigators. Even then, legal prohibitions would remain a weak deterrent because of the time it takes to secure a final judgment in the courts. The surest solution — certain to be mightily resisted by companies and unions would be to require independent management of all pension funds of any size.

Israelis and the Saudi Plan

In condemning both the sale of American arms to Saudi Arabia and the Fahd peace proposals so vehemently. Mr. Begin is reflecting the views of the majority of Israelis. Israel feels friendless. But if Israel is an island in a hostile sea, it must sooner or later look for ways of making the sea less hostile. The Fahd plan includes the right of "all states in the region to live in peace." While Mr. Begin's response is to say contemptuously that in Arab eyes Israel is not a state, many Israelis might, on reflection, take the view that Saudi intentions should at least be tested before being dismissed out of hand. One of the reasons why the Palestinian problem has remained unresolved for so long is that the Arab side has mistakenly rejected successive plans for peace, each one of which has offered terms less favorable than the last. The lesson should not be lost on the Israelis.

Moscow and the 'Jewish Entity'

Support for the Saudi peace plan is spreading every day to encompass the world. But Communism is opposing the plan either overtly or through its agents and lackeys, who repeat what is said in the Jewish entity [Israel] and Moscow about the plan. If America is serious about supporting peace, then the Jewish entity's rejection is worthless.

1906: Women With Ambition

NEW YORK - Woman's sphere in life in the United States is widening. The appointment of Miss Mary Quackenboss as Special Assistant State's District Attorney is the first instance of a woman gaining such a position in the Federal service. Mrs. Quackenboss' rise in the profession has been rapid. She was admitted to the bar in 1904 and conducted several noted cases. The widening ambition of American women is illustrated in a different way by Miss Henrietta Snyder, a buxom young woman of Columbia County, who applied to the New York Central Railway Company for a place as a locomotive fireman. She has taken a correspondence course of study and declares she can "hold the job."

1931: Battle in Manchuria

MUKDEN - After months of guerrilla warfare in Manchuria, China and Japan finally have settled down to a pitched battle for possession of the strategic Taonan-Tsitsihar railway bridge spanning the Nonni River. Hundreds of dead are reported along a five-mile front. Grave consequences, involving not only the two disputing nations but Russia as well, are foreseen here. Latest dispatches state that the Japanese force, far outnumbered by the Chinese, is desperately holding its position on the bridge. In the warning oote that the Heilungkian government has sent to foreign consuls at Tsitshar, the area is "oow designated as a war zone in which foreigners are requested not to travel."

William Haratunian, deputy director of the U.S. Information Agency-funded radio station, will leave his post shortly for some other Foreign Service joh, as yet unannounced.

Word of the change was sent by James B. Conkling, the new VOA director, who has been prodded lately by conservative critics demanding changes in what Human Events, a conservative weekly, eharacterizes as "the Voice's already too soft approach behind the Iron Curtain."

Since its inception at the end of World War II as the U.S. Information Agency, the overseas informa-tion arm of the government has periodically faced attempts to subect it to overall policy direction by the White House or State Department. The agency fought off such intrusions with the argument that it needed independence to protect the credibility of its work abroad, particularly that of the Voice of America.

Under legislation passed in 1947 and 1953 to protect Americans from being propagandized by their own government, Soviet Propaganda Alert is classified as a "program item" and therefore cannot be made public in the United States.

However, under a congressional exemption from the lew, excerpts from the first issue of the publication were read into the Congressional Record on Oct. 26 and Oct. 27 by Rep. Robert H. Michel. Republican of Illinois, the House minority leader. The excerpts catalog characteris-tics and themes of Soviet propagands, and examples of what the administration calls Soviet "disin-

On Oct. 8, the State Department released a four-page special report on Soviet "disinformation" activi-ty that included allegations Moscow was responsible for reports that the United States was behind the seizure of the Grand Mosque in Mecca in 1979, that a U.S. diplomat named to a post in India had been an intelligence agent and that the CIA was implicated in the air crash death of Panama's leader, Gen. Omar Torrijos Herrera, in August of this year. Growing List Since the publication of that document, the administration appears to have added to its list of Soviet activities support for the recent anti-nuclear demonstrations

State Department official, the CIA has provided the State Department with fairly detailed evidence purportedly linking money from the oviet bloc to peace groups in West Germany. Mr. Wick, speaking to the Na-tional Council of World Affairs Organizations here on Oct. 23, said, according to a member of the audience, that the U.S. International Communication Agency had been working with other govern-ment branches to "develop" evidence that demonstrations against the stationing of new U.S. missiles in Europe were Communist-in-

U.S. Said to Consider Decisive Salvador Action

By Leslie H. Gelb New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A consensus has developed in the Reagan administration that the civil war in El Salvador has reached a stalemate that will eventually cause the defeat of the government unless the United States takes decisive action soon, according to key administra-tion officials.

The officials said Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. had been pressing the Pentagon to examine a series of options for possible military action in El Salvador and against Cuba and Nicaragua. The administration has accused those two countries of being conduits of aid to leftist rebels in El

Most of the officials said the procedure was more than simple contingency planning, given the short deadlines for producing the plans and the general feeling that something must be done to prevent the collapse of the Salvadoran government of President Jose Napocón Duarte.

Officials said that the Defense Department opposed the use of U.S. forces in combat in Central America or the Caribbean. The position of Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was described this Almost none of the possible mil-itary actions is likely to be successful; it is doubtful that the American public and Congress would support military intervention, and the Soviei Union could respond against West Berlin or elsewhere without there being much of a U.S.

Meeting Expected

The officials said that the military options, along with a package of economic and diplomatic initia-tives, were scheduled to be discussed soon with the president. Senior officials in the White House, including Edwin Meese 3d, Mr. Reagan's counselor, and Richard V. Allen, the national security adviser, were said to be skeptical about military initiatives.

No senior State Department official would comment on the military planning or provide an expla-nation for its urgency. Nor was it clear in the minds of some officials whether Mr. Haig was seriously in-terested in some kind of military action or whether he intended instead to send a strong warning to Cuba and other supporters of the guerrillas in El Salvador.

As described by the officials, the memorandum said the United States faced serious threats in the region and that the administration had to do more than it was doing. It went on to deal with the options of public relations campaigns to discredit President Fidel Castro of Cuba and to expose his role in fostering insurgencies around the world, and it placed heavy emphasis on the need to consider military operations.

The officials said that the memorandum and other communications from Mr. Haig concentrated on getting to "the source" of the problems in the region. The immediate "source" was described as Cuba, with the Soviet Union playing an important role in the background.

Officials said examples of requests for Pentagon studies were phrased in terms of "show me what U.S. forces could do if there was a decision to blockade Nicaragua or launch certain types of op-erations against Cuba." On Cuba, the military was asked

WASHINGTON — King

Hussein of Jordan says that he is going through with plans to pur-chase air defense equipment from the Soviet Union because "the door was closed to me" by the Carter administration when he first sought to buy the equipment from the United States.

In a meeting Wednesday night with a few reporters in Washing-ton, the king described the transaction as a "one-time" deal that he felt compelled to make

He said the Soviet equipment would not involve an increase in Soviet influence in Jordan and that it would be manned by Jordanians. The king did not describe the specifics of the air defense system nor did he say how much it would cost.

He expressed his hopes for resumption of Jordan's previous purchases of military equipment from the United States as a result of the improved relations with the Reagan administration. The negotiations with the Soviet Union have been under way for months, and the king said that they were undertaken because of the voluera-

Reform Rejected In Social Security By House Panel

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The House Ways and Means Committee has narrowly defeated an attempt to deal with the long-range financial crisis that will face the Social Security system early in the oext cen-

An amendment sponsored by Rep. J.J. Pickle, Democrat of Texas, that would have increased revenue to the retirement fund by an average of about $20 billion a year for the next 75 years, was voted down Wednesday, 18-4, with most of the Democrats on the panel in opposition.

The committee also defeated a move to take the assets of the Social Security system out of the gov-ernment's unified budget system for bookkeeping purposes. Some critics have maintained that President Reagan wanted to build up a surplus in the retirement fund in order to help balance the budget.

The Ways and Means Committee decided to abandon proposals to draft a solution for Social Security's short-range financial shortage, anticipated over the oext five years, and go to conference instead with the Senate to resolve their difbility of his country to air attack, especially from Syria.

When the Iran-Iraq war started last year, Syria, an alfy of the Iranians, threatened his country, he said. Jordan was left in a precarious position, he said, because its U.S.-supplied Hawk antiaircraft missiles, designed as mobile missiles, were fixed in place under re-strictions imposed by Washington at the time of sale.

The Carter administration would not permit him to buy equipment in this country, according to the king, because of Jordan's refusal to participate in the Camp David peace process.

He added that he had not come to Washington this time with a "shopping list" for military equipment and that during his talks with President Reagan and administration officials he had made no spe-cific requests for unitary hard-

The king said he found the Reagan administration willing to keep an open mind about Middle East diplomatic moves and repeated a conviction that Israeli-Egyptian negotiations on Palestinian self-rule would not succeed because the rights of Palestinians for self-determination were not being taken into account.

Impatient but Pragmatic Young Democrats Are Beginning to Rise in the U.S. Congress

By Martin Tolchin

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - They are hardly household names beyond the Beltway, but on Capitol Hill in this session of Congress a new generation of Democratic leaders has begun to emerge.

These House members in their 30s and early 40s have sharply different reference points from their predecessors. They are the children of the Vietnam War, not World War II; of John F. Kennedy, not Franklin D. Roosevelt; of television, not the print media. They have arrived on the scene at a time when the Democratic leadership often looks tired, sometimes appears out of touch and is under

Costa Rica's $2.7-Billion Debt Is Viewed As a Threat to Nation's Political Stability

By Christopher Dickey

Washington Past Service
SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — Five months after Costa Rica negotiated a three-year, $330-million bailout from the International Monetary Fund, its economy has slid to the point where international commercial banks have suspended all lending and the govern-ment has ceased paying all hut partial interest on its $2.7-billion

In recent weeks the government of Central America's only civilian democracy has retained three American consulting firms to begin negotiations on debt reschedulwith the commercial banks. Additionally, since Costa Rica is what Washington says it would like the rest of Central America to be politically, it believes the Unit-ed States will pay almost any price to help it stay affoat.

The 2.2 million people of this proud, self-consciously democratic country continue to maintain their equanimity about the future and confidence in Costa Rica's pluralistic tradition.

But a combination of factors beyond anyone's control on the international economic scene and the ill-fated melding of good intertions with bad management domestically have made Costa Rica's economy one of the weakest in a region where strong economies have ceased to exist, and moved it ever more rapidly toward total col-

After a stormy dispute between Costa Rica and the International Monetary Fund last year because Costa Rica could not or would not meet the IMF's politically difficult economic guidelines, the United States lobbied hard with the fund to reach a new agreement. Months of haggling led finally an agreement in June for the IMF to grant a three-year, $330-million extended fund facility. The first scheduled disbursement should have come in August but Costa Rica's government did not even ask for it, knowing that it already had broken the rules again.

The country is, for the moment at least, in "noncompliance" with some parts of the agreement and is seeking to renegotiate terms with the fund once again.

On Feb. 7 Costa Ricans will choose a new president and in May be will take office.

There is constant worry that peace still prevails here partly bebegun to be felt. Much of the present crisis is

Flying Tigers Called Paper Tigers During Sentimental Visit to China

The Flying Tigers, a group of vounteer pilots formed by Gen. Claire Chennault in 1941, have been credited with saving China's wartime capital of Chungking from Japanese bombers.

A former Flying Tiger pilot, Edward Lydon of Buzzards Bay,

Kevin Brownlow: After 'Napoleon,' a King Vidor Classic

International Herald Tribune

DARIS - Kevin Brownlow, the British director, has invented new profession. He is a motion-

A painstaking perfectionist, he pent 13 years on research and ravel to hunt down the missing ragments of Abel Gance's 1927 pic, "Napoleon," designed for rojection on a widened triple creen. Brownlow assembled fragnents of the gigantic movie into a learly complete version of the rigical. Accompanied by a symthony orchestra, it was shown first it New York's Radio City Music dall, then in London and at the colosseum in Rome. Jack Lang. France's Minister of Culture, at ended its open-air performance in he Roman amphitheater (during a hunderstorm) and said that he will sponsor its screening in Paris

The reception of the restored Napoleon has encouraged Brownlow to further test the public taste for silent films. His latest project, which he worked on with David Gill under the auspices of the British Film Institute and Thames TV, is King Vidor's "The Crowd" (1928). The film, with a score composed by Carl Davis who arranged the music for "Napoleon"), is to be presented in London for three special performances: at the Empire Theatre on Nov. 19 and for a matinee and evening showing in Queen Elizabeth Hall on Nov. 22.

Another Aspect "It will reveal to audiences another aspect of the silent screen," said Brownlow, in Paris to confer with King Vidor, who was in France at the invitation of the French government, "Napoleon'

"The Crowd" came out before the Wall Street crash and yet foresaw the conditions the Depression was to impose. "It was an imusual film to come from MGM," said Brownlow, "but Vidor after The Big Parade' had an enviable box-office record and he was allowed a free hand. He directed it with great skill and its moving camera and expressionistic sets gave it special significance and smashing emotional impact."

Brownlow, tall, sparse and sporting a pointed beard, looks the university professor rather than the film director. He has a teacher's best traits: a profound knowledge of his subject, the ability to disseminate information interestingly and a remarkable sense of

His history of the Hollywood stars and directors of the 1920s, The Parade's Gone By" (1968), became a best seller and has been widely translated. era - Lillian Gish, Allan Dwan, Gloria Swanson, Clarence Brown, cameramen. producers, scriptwriters and stuntmen - and excerpts from famous films, in-cluding those of Douglas Fair-banks, D.W. Griffith and Rex Ingram. The programs were enormously successful in the United States and abroad

Brownlow was born in Sussex in 1938, long after the making of silent films had been discontinued.

When he was 11, he saw "Pecheur

Jacques de Baroncelli based on Pierre Loti's story. "That first si-lent I saw opened a world of lost art for me," he recalled. "I was

He insists that silent films should be seen with music, pointing out that they were photographed to musical accompani-ment and specified it in projection. "Without it they are only half there," he said. "The silent film is probably more closely related to pallet - being a blending of pantomime and music - than it is to the spoken drama."

MGM, he said, has promised permission for the showing of four other silent films if all goes well with "The Crowd." They are "Flesh and the Devil" with Garbo and John Gilbert, Vidor's "Show People" with Marion Davies, "Man, Woman and Sin" with Jeanne Eagels and Gilbert, a story of a journalist in Washington D.C., and Lubitsch's "The Student Prince" with Norma Shearer and Ramon Novarro. Special musical scores will be prepared for all four. He would like to have had von Stroheim's "Merry Widow," but he has never found a sufficiently good print of it.

Many Films Lost

Unfortunately, producers never understood what treasures they had. Countless films were destroyed after exploitation, burnt to get the $25 of silver the celluloid contained. Others disintegrated in damp vaults. "Now the studios wish they had them back for their commercial value," said Brownlow. As far as he knows, most of the First National films have been lost, and one Garbo film, "The Divine Woman," can't be found.

Brownlow has had some hairraising adventures in looking for missing movies. One day be received word that a studio storage room had a print of "The City Gone Wild," a Cruze film with Louise Brooks. He rushed over to find that an attendant, finding the film covered with dust, had thrown it into a pail of water. Its images dissolved.

"One always hopes that private collectors may have copies of lost films," said Brownlow. If they do, they are not anxious to spread the news. "The studios, having thrown away many masterpieces, now insist that the missing copies are their property, and private collec-tors are in danger of losing their collections." Brownlow knows a collector in England who has the only known print of Clarence Brown's The Signal Tower," the only one of Brown's films that is missing. "He told me he had it," Brownlow said, "but he won't let me see it. He's what one might call a film miser."

The conference included 34 workshops on such subjects as liv-

Phyllis Sanders, a 62-year-old radio and TV commentator, urged women in her workshop on "Changing the Image of Older

Women" to let advertisers know what they think of the "negative images" of older women on TV commercials.

"They show older women sniffing around for odors in a younger woman's house, or searching for age spots on their hands, or otherwise acting weird or scatterbrained," she said. "This is dangerous, because negative images repeated and repeated tend to become self-fulfilling because of the power of television. Eventual-

Pennzoil, Socal Rebuff Request From Marathon

HOUSTON — Pennzoil and Standard Oil of California have rebuffed approaches by Marathon Oil in an attempt to prevent Mobil's akeover bid.

Baine P. Kerr, Pennzoil president, said Wednesday that his company has rejected a request by major shareholders of Marathon to acquire their company. He added that Pennzoil had no discussions with Marathon management concerning a merger or acquistion.

Socal also turned down an approach from Marathon, the Wall Street Journal reported. Socal Chairman George Keller said his company is concentrating on oil exploration and cannot justify the high prices involved in this type of acquisition, the newspaper said. He indicated there could be a low enough price for Marathon "at which it would interest anyone," but did not say what that price might be.

B. Gill Clements, president of SEDCO, the largest single Marathon shareholder, has said Mobil's offer of $85 a share for 67 percent of Marathon's stock is unacceptable.

Diamond International, Goldsmith in Talks

NEW YORK - Diamond International said it has begun talks on the possibility of its acquisition by a firm affiliated with British businessman James Goldsmith:

Mr. Goldsmith heads the French Generale Occidentale group of companies. Diamond, a packaging, lumber and building materials firm, said its board would have to modify an agreement between Diamond and the Genérale Occidentale group, which now restricts Mr. Goldsmith's ability to fully enter into discussions.

Cavenham (USA), a subsidiary of Générale Occidentale, has about a 23-percent interest in Diamond after a tender offer for Diamond's shares last year. In June, 1980 Diamond reached an agreement with Cavenham, whereby Cavenham promised to limit its investment in the company to

FDIC Approval Seen for Takeover of N.Y. Bank

New York Times Service NEW YORK — The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. has approved in principle the takeover of the falling Greenwich Savings Bank by Metropolitan Savings and Brooklyn Savings, according to banking sources.

The transaction, which the sources said was completed Wednesday, was expected to cost the FDIC between $400 million and $500 million.

Metropolitan Savings and Brooklyn Savings, considered among the strongest savings banks in the state, announced plans earlier this year to merge in December. The pending three-bank combination, including Greenwich, would create the largest savings bank in the state, with deposits of about 36 billion.

W. German Electronics Profits Seen to Decline

FRANKFURT - Profitability of the West German electronics industry is expected to decline to 1.3 to 1.4 percent of turnover in 1981 from last year's 1.5 to 1.6 percent, the industry association said Thursday. Producer prices this year have held between 3 and 3.5 percent higher than in 1980, but have failed to compensate for rising costs, with wages rising an average of 5 percent and material costs 4 percent, it said. Incoming orders rose in nominal terms 1 percent in the first three quarters of 1981 against the year-ago period, but fell 2.5 percent in price-adjusted terms. But foreign demand helped offset domestic weakness.

Global Credits Expand In Quarter, Says BIS

BASEL - International banking credits expanded on a real basis in the second quarter of 1981 in comparison to the first quarter, the Bank for International Settlements said Friday in its latest report.

Although overall asset and liability figures showed slight dec-lines, the report said that "underly-ing growth" totaled $35 billion in the second quarter, up from $30 billion in the first quarter. Borrowing by non-oil developing countries was responsible for most of the rise.

Among significant international more pents, BIS noted that the net outflow of funds from U.S. banks totaled $7.6 billion in the second quarter, continuing a first-quarter trend and bringing the total net outflow of funds to $56 billion since the end of the first quarter of

New lending to countries ootside the reporting area rose during the second quarter to $16 billion from $7 billion in the first quarter. Lending within the reporting area, on the other hand, declined to $19 billion from $23 billion.

OPEC Decline

There was a further "sbarp" decline in new deposits received by the reporting banks from OPEC, Deposits totaled $1.6 billion, down from $5.1 billion in the first quarter, making the deposit total only about equal to OPEC's borrowings and thus canceling it out as a net funds supplier. OPEC had sup-plied about $7.5 billion in funds on a net basis in the first quarter.

Eastern Europe continued to draw down its balances in the reporting banks, taking out $1.4 billion in the second quarter after taking $3.5 billion in the first quarter. The Soviet Union alone drew down deposits by an unadjusted $5 billion during the first half, the report said.

BIS went on to say that official monetary institutions continued to draw down their deposits with the reporting banks, continuing a trend observed in the previous two rowing was brought about in large measure by countries outside Latin America that had on balance had hardly any recourse to internationbank credit in the first quarter of the year," the report said.

Credits to Latin America

The report singled out the U.S. banks in this respect, noting a renewed increase in the exposure of U.S. banks to the developing world. Thus U.S. bank credits rose by $4.6 billion after "near stagna-tion" in the first quarter, BIS said. "As usual, countries in Latin America were the major beneficiaries, obtaining $2.4 billion, but strong growth of $1.5 billion was also recorded in lending to countries in Asia, the report said.

The report noted that Canadian banks were heavy importers of foreign funds during the second quarter, continuing the pattern of the previous two quarters. External liabilities rose by $9.5 billion in the second quarter to make for total indebtedness of $19.8 billion, up from $6.5 billion nine months ear-"A significant part of these funds was used to finance takeover activities of Canadian firms, particularly in the energy sector," the

He defended the so-called trig-ger price mechanism, but said that if the U.S. steel industry files a large number of antidumping complaints with the government, "We will have to let [the trigger price system) go by the boards."

Under the system, steel entering the country for sale below a set base price triggers a Commerce Department review, and penalty duties can be imposed. Thursday's announcements

The newspaper, quoting in-formed sources, said about 40 forzign oil companies had responded to the bidding. In Peking, the Workers' Daily said in September that China had signed survey agreements with 48 oil companies and that they were surveying 420,000 square kilometers (160,000 square miles) of seabed.

That the government itself would file such complaints marks a dramatic change.

Government sources in Washington say the Common Market has been trying in head off the filing of any new steel cases. The Common Market has said that if the Commerce Department initiated an action against European steelmakers, it would be considered a bostile gesture because of the importance of the trade to the Europeans in their battle with unemployment.

U.S. steel industry output is now down to 65 percent of capacity — compared with percentages in the high 80s last spring — with 50,000 steelworkers laid off and another 15,000 on short work weeks.

EEC Body Fines Klöckner Over Steel Production

BRUSSELS - West German steelmaker Klökner-Werke has been fined 5 million Deutsche marks by the EEC Commission for exceeding its production quota in the first quarter of this year.

In Duisburg, West Germany, a Klöckner spokesman said Thursday that the company cannot com-ment on the EEC fine until the Commission informs the company directly and justifies the fine. Commission sources said the fine was the first imposed since the Commission introduced mandatory production cuts on the EEC steel mdustry a year ago to end a price war among firms competing for shrinking markets.

At least 10 letters had been been steel firms requesting explanations for apparent flaunting of quotas, an official said, adding if the coupanies concerned failed to give adequate reasons, fines - reckoned on the basis of about $80 an excess metric ton - would be immediately imposed.

There has been widespread speculation that flaunting quotas, which apply to 70 percent of EEC output, has kept prices below U.S. and Japanese levels. The Board of Directors of ENSERCH Corporation on October 29, 1981, declared a regular quarterly dividend of 34 cents per share of common stock, payable December 7, 1981, to shareholders of record November 20, 1981.

Imports in August totaled 2.2 million tons, or 25 percent of domestic shipments; they slipped to

1.7 million in September, representing a 20.5-percent share of the In the first nine months, 14.5 million tons were shipped to the United States, an increase of 24.6 percent over the similar period of 1980 and representing a market share of 20.5 percent.

U.S. Auto Sales Hit a 23-Year Low DETROIT — The start of the 1982 model year collapsed around U.S. anto manufacturers last month as domestic car sales fell 26 percent from a year ago, making it the worst October since 1958 on a daily sales basis. Sales of imported cars also dropped sharply as worry about a recession and continued high interest rates sent total anto sales tumbling 25 percent from the previous October's weak totals.

Late-Month Unswing

It marked the third straight month in which the imports cap-tured between 24 and 25 percent of the market, compared with 27 to 29 percent earber in the year.

Although the final 10 days of the month showed some strengthening, October had a seasonally adjusted annual sales rate of 5 mil-bon domestic cars, becoming the new low point of Detroit's worst recession since the 1930s.

The annual rate represents the number of cars that would be sold if the October sales pace were to continue all year. U.S. automakers sold 491,107 cars last month, compared with 663,843 in October, 1980. Import sales were estimated at 156,000, off 13.7 percent from a weak year-ago performance.

Foreign Cars' Low Share

The foreign car share of the market was 24.1 percent, the low-est since 23.7 percent in November, 1980. The weak October showing was especially striking because the four big-U.S. companies were offering rebates, cut-rate financing and other discounts.

"That's indicative of just how bad things are," said Maryann

Keller, automotive analyst at Paine Webber Mitchell Hutchins.

Pace of Canadian Energy Plan Slows Down

By Henry Giniger

OTTAWA - Canada's National Energy Program is a year old, and the country has moved considerably closer to its goal of attaining 50 percent Canadian ownership of the oil and gas industry by 1990.

booming energy capital.

But in talking about what has been done so far, Mr. Lalonde expressed both pride and dissatisfaction. "I think we would all agree that the past 12 months have made quite a dent in the numbers," be said, but added, "It is something of a testament to the extent of foreign ownership that, after a busy year of acquisitions, Canadians still own only about 35 percent of the industry.

Officials note that one element of program has not yet been achieved. The energy program calls for "Canadian control of a significant number of the larger oil and gas firms" and none of the foreign companies taken over thus far is within the top 10, where the vast bulk of production revenues is

Of the dozen or so purchases, the largest was that by Dome Petroleum of 52 percent of Hudsoo's Bay Oil and Gas from Conoco, for $1.6 billion U.S. The next two largest were by government agencies, Petro-Canada's purchase of Petrofinn-Canada from Petrofina of Belgium for $1.2 billion (U.S.) and Canada Development Corp.'s pur-chase of Aquitaine-Canada from Elf-Aquitaine of France for $1.3

Although the energy program has been looked upon in some Canadian and foreign business circles as an assault on foreign capi-tal, Mr. Lalonde said, "In no way can the National Energy Program be regarded as an attempt to begin a general reduction of the role of foreign investment in Canada." He called the oil and gas indus-try "a special case," but saw an im-portant role even in that sector for vance a 25-percent interest in all oil and gas discoveries on federally owned properties, including all foreign capital, notably in joint

Mr. Lalonde also predicted further acquisitions, but officials of his department said they did not expect the same pace of ownership change as in the first year.

There is already a slowdown, in large part attributed to a reluctance among companies to borrow at current high interest rates to finance takeovers. Tenneco of Houston, for example, was reported to be having trouble finding buyers for assets of its Tenneco Oil nf Canada subsidiary.

The government is also encouraging a slowdown in acquisitions in general to help relieve pressure on the beleaguered Canadian dollar. About 6.5 billion Canadian dollars ($5.4 billion) have been spent thus far.

Officials say they are also counting on increased Canadian participation in energy production by means other than acquisitions. A program giving grants and financial advantages proportional in the degree of Canadian ownership and control is expected to eucourage more Canadian capital to enter the energy field.

A program known as farm-ins, by which Canadians assume prop-erty leases held by foreigners and then conduct the exploration and development in return for half of the revenues if there is a find, is another method of bringing in The government, through public corporations, is also claiming in offshore sites. This provision is causing the most strain with the United States, which contends that the measure is unfair because it retroactively affects investments de-veloped by U.S. companies when there was little or no Canadian capital available. U.S. officials are seeking to modify this provision, but Mr. Lalonde said that even with the government's 25-percent share and the phasing out of depletion allowances, exploration in Canada would still be a good deal. He said that the net cost of a dollar's worth of exploration in Canada would be only 53 cents, compared with 67 cents in Texas.

OPEC Reportedly Considering Aid

For Oil Purchases by Third World

By Carole Shifrin Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — The Japanese saw their first train in 1854 when Commodore Matthew C. Perry of the U.S. Navy arrived in Japan with a working scale-model of a steam train as a gift for the ruling Shogun.

Now, 127 years later, the Japanese have come to the United States bearing a rail gift of their own: an offer to help the United States build a high-speed passenger railway using Japan's sophisticated Shinkansen "Bullet Train" technology.

Since its first route opened in Ja-pan in 1964, the Japanese National Railways Shinkansen, traveling at an average speed of about 100 miles an hour, has carried, at a profit, almost 1.7 billion passengers on the 664-mile line between Tokyo and Hakata, with an unbro-ken safety record. Two more route segments, extending another 456 miles, will be completed next year. A 10-member delegation of the Japanese Diet was to join 15 coogressmen and senators Thursday Japan's House Committee on for the inaugural meeting of the Transportation, told the hearing Japan-United States Rail Contact that a team of engineers from Japan-United States Rail Contact that a team of engineers from Japan-United States Rail Contact that a team of engineers from Japanmarily to promote development of line now in operation cost $5.9 billion at the time of construction. The Reagan administration hasbeen seeking to reduce the federal role in railroad funding, but members of Congress who appeared be-fore the committee Wednesday appeared optimistic about the prospects for high-speed trains in the United States.

Mr. Davignon told a symposium in Tokyo that a strategy must be developed by the two sides, encompassing long- and short-term solutions to produce quick results. He called on Japan to limit certain exports to the EEC and to raise imports of manufactured goods.

Mr. Davignon said the call for Japan to limit some exports is not a call for protectionism, but rather a request to allow the EEC time to restructure its industry. "We real-ize and accept that when others are more competitive we have to ad-just," he said.

But he said time is running out for that restructuring, and termed it essential that the EEC know where it stands in regard to access to the Japanese market.

AMONG THE BELIEVERS An Islamic Journey By V.S. Naipaul. 430 pp. $15. Alfred A. Knopf, 201 East 52d St., New York 10022. Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

NEAR the very start of his complain about a book that yields so many incandescent passages — the before he has begun his "Islamic Journey." V.S. Naipaul observes a lictional Iranian doctor who has renounced the West for the sake of his Shiite religion while continuing to depend on Western technology: "That expectation — of others continuing to create, of the alien, necessary civilization going on — is implicit in the act of renunciation, and is its great flaw."

More than 400 pages later, as be is about to complete his travels through four countries in the throes of Islamic revival, Naipaul writes of a Tehran newspaper editor who has sent his two sons to stody in the United States: "So, deep down, he was divided. With one part of his mind be was for the one part of his mind be was for the faith, and opposed to all that stood outside it; in a world grown strange, he wished to continue to belong to bimself for as long as possible. With another part of his mind he recognized the world outside as paramount, and of the future of his core It was in part of the future of his sons. It was in that division of the mind — as much as in the excesses of the shah - that the Islamic revolution had begun in Iran. And it was there it was ending."

And in the vast stretches of the book in between, Naipaul repeats at least two-dozen times the variations on these several themes — the anti-Western, anti-technological longing for purity of those who embrace Islam, the fantasy that such purity existed in the distant past, the absence of any statecraft to accompany the purification, the longing expressed as murderous revolutionary rage and all the while the tacit, unexplored as-sumption that while the "great new encircling civilization" was to be rejected, "at the same time it was to be depended on." All of which leaves us with the distinct impression that Naïpaul had made up his mind about Islam even before be began his sojourn among the believers, and that nothing be encountered along the way did much to alter his thinking. But then what else should we bave expected. In 17 books, 10 of them his progressively more stunning and gloomy novels. Naipaul has been working out his fear and loathing of what he bas called "half-made societies" as well as what he might as well call "half-unmade societies" now that be has experienced Iran, Pakistan, Malaysia and Indonesia. He was hardly to be reassured by a journey that made him foresee so much more violence and bloodshed.

Nor is it quite fair to expect the shaping art of the skilled novelist in a text based on a six-month journey that after all "had been a series of gambles; what had come my way had come my way." Nor can one really primitive village, educational center or religious leader, carries on ever-so-slightly patronizing conversations with him and concludes yet again: "This late 20th-century Islam appeared to raise political issues. But it had the flaw of its origins - the flaw that ran right through Islamic history: to the political issues it raised it offered no political or practical solutions. It offered only the faith, it offered only the Prophet, who would settle everything — but who bad ceased to exist. This political Islam was rage, anarchy."

The surest clue that Naipaul him-self is a little bored with what he is reporting is his tendency to refer back to earlier incidents or characters as if he had never mentioned them before If be has lost the sense of drive in his repetitive and drifting narrative, then many incandescent passages — the descriptions of the idle building cranes poised all over post-revolutionary Tehran. The episode on the train from northern Iran in which a young revolutionary-committee man infuriates the author's revolutionist companion. Behzad, by forhidding him to play a simple card game. The interview with a Pakistani doctor's son, who reads sex books "to become stable" and to avoid getting over:

stable" and to avoid getting over-excited when confronted with literature like Playboy magazine. Or a dozen other incidents that ignite. Naipaul's pages. Still, one longs, if only for the sake of drama, to see some evolution io Naipaul's thinking. One hungers occasionally for a bit more art. One wants some break in the routine wherein the author makes contact with a representative of the culture he is explor-ing, travels with him to visit some ed to feel it? Thus it is just a little too long that we are made to wait for Naipaul's ap-palling conclusion, in which Behzad, the revolutionist, decides that Ayatol-lah Ruhollah Khomeini is really nothing more than "a petit bourgeois," and 'There will have to be another revolution."

how should we the readers be expect-

As Naipaul symbolizes Behzad in the final paragraph of "Among the Believers": "The life that had come to Islam had not come from within. It had come from outside events and circumstances, the spread of the universal civilization. It was the late 20th century that had made Islam revolutionary, given new meaning to old Islamic ideas of equality and union. shaken up static or retarded societies. It was the late 20th century — and not the faith - that could supply the answers - in institutions, legislation, economic systems, And, paradoxically, out of the Islamic revival, Islamic fundamentalism, that appeared to look backward, there would remain in many Moslem countries, with all the emotional charge derived from the Prophet's faith, the idea of modern revolution. ### BRIDGE

EVER since the world team cham-pionship for the Bermuda Bowl was inaugurated in 1950, North American teams have been in contention. On every occasion but one they have finished first or second. The lone exception was in Rio de Janeiro in 1969 when Italy and Taiwan contested the final. The unsuccessful American team on that occasion included two brilliant young experts: Bob Hamman and Eddie Kantar: Discouraged by the result, they promptly dissolved their partner-

In the next 11 years, Hamman won three Bennuda Bowl titles and Kantar two. The wounds of Rio seemed to have bealed; so, in a moment of mutual weakness they decided to venture forth again.

Before beginning play in a regional tournament in Reno, Nev., Kantar found, as he explained in an entertain-ing article in the American Contract Bridge League Bulletin, that he had to review "Robert's Rules." These are not rules of order, but rather rules to order the conduct of Robert Hamman's partners.

Rule 1: If a number of bids are available and one of them is three no-trump, that's the hid.

Rule 2: Never play Robert for the perfect hand. He never has it.

Rule 3: If everyone at the table seems to be bidding his bead off, trust them, not Robert.

Rule 4: When contemplating a slam, always subtract a king from what it sounds like Robert has before bidding the slam.

Rule 5: Be practical.
Rule 6: Do the right thing.
Unfortunately, the rules gave no.
guidance about situations in which the rules were in conflict. Poor Kantar kept wanting to make aggressive three no-trump bids in accordance with rule I, but had to worry about rules 2 and 3, not to mention 6. When he moved toward a slam and went down only one in five spades, be was charged, of course: with having broken rules 2 The coup de grâce - or perhaps disgrace - came on the diagramed deal, with Kantar sitting East and Robert West. The opponents' bidding followed a rather erratic course, starting with an invitational jump raise in which the distribution did not sufficiently compensate for the lack of trumps and lack of high-eard points. Whether a void should be shown in responding to Blackwood is a point that is often argued. Some experts with the North hand would bid six diamonds directly, promising one acc and a void in diamonds. This would have prevented South from inquiring about kings and might have prevented a debacle for the defenders.

By Alan Truscott

As it was, Kantar missed an opportunity to double six clubs to direct a lead in that suit. His postmortem excases — the hope that they would bid seven spades, and the fear that they would redouble six clubs and play that contract — did not hold water. He tried to rectify the situation hy'doubling six spades and left Robert with a considerable problem.

Such doubles are normally the Lightner variety, asking for a specific abnormal lead. But Hamman knew that his partner would have doubled five diamonds if he had wanted a diamond lead and six clubs if he had mond lead and six clubs if be had' wanted a club lead. And he would have passed if he wanted a heart lead. So, Robert considered three possibilities: 1) This is one of the rare slam double that the transfer. doubles that call for a trump lead. 2). This is a take-out double. 3) My partner is an idiot.

Eventually, he shrugged his shoulders and led a diamond; so, South ders and led a diamond; so. South scored an overrick. Whether the cluh lead Kantar wanted would have beaten the contract is doubtful. South could have made the slam by playing low on the first trick, but be might have feared a singleton lead and played the ace, going down.

We should all look forward to the next performance by this rare partners.

Reds Trade Griffey To Yankees for 2 Minor Leaguers

By Murray Chass New York Times Service

WEST-RANGE LETTER TO STORY TO

NEW YORK — George Steinbr-noer, the aggressive Yankee wher who says that he believes in effection, has shown again that also believes in persistence.

A year ago Steinbrenner tried to cquire Dave Winfield in a trade vith San Diego, failed, then signed im as a free agent. This year, steinbrenner tried to get Ken Grif-cy from Cincinnati before he beame a free agent, and this time iteinbrenner succeeded. The Yankees announced the leal Wednesday, disclosing that hey had obtained Griffey, a 31-rear-old outfielder, from the Reds or two minor league players, and hat they had reached agreement with him on a long-term contract. Neither the Yankees nor Tom Reich, Griffey's lawyer, would dislose terms of the contract which hey said had not been signed by he time of the Yankee Stadium

What About Jackson? Steinbrenner will now have Winfield and Griffey in his outfield with Jerry Mumphrey, who two weeks ago signed a six-year contract worth $750,000 a year. That outfield lineup would appear to leave no room for Reggie Jackson, who has declared for free agency but who could still sign with the Yankees. Jackson was stunned when he heard about the trade that brought Griffey, a .307 career hister, to the Yankees. Wow! That's unreal," Jackson said by telephone from his home in Carmel, Calif. "You want me to call the Mayflower moving man? George asked me to come and see him. I don't know if it'll be a waste of time now. It doesn't look good for the home team here, does it? I don't think it looks good for me." When Steinbrenner's interest in Griffey became known several weeks ago, it was said by some that if he wanted to re-sign Jackson, he would have to secure Jackson's approval that he would be strictly a designated hitter. That would oow appear to be the case. When Jackson was asked how he felt about a possible designated-hitter role, he said, "I think I'll just have to wait and hear it from him. The situation is too volatile for me to say anything now." Although he was in his stadium office, Steinbrenner did not attend the news conference. He left the announcement to Lou Saban, the Yankee president, who said the Yankees had acquired Griffey for Brian Ryder, a 21-year-old pitcher, who had an 8-7 record at Columbus this senson, and a player to be named. That player is to be another pitcher, 20-year-old Fred To-liver, who was 7-3 at Greensboro.

Griffey, whose two-year, $1.4 million contract with the Reds ex-pired at the end of the season, could have declared free agency and gone through the Nov. 13 draft. But the Reds asked Reich in September if he and Griffey would be amenable to a trade before the draft, and Reich and Griffey agreed to let the club seek a deal.

The Reds talked with the Yankess and the Los Angeles Dodgers.
Dick Wagner, the Reds' president, said he probably could have concluded a deal with the Yankees in September, but the Yankees' playoff appearances slowed the

"I'm more pleased with it this way than if I had gone into the free agent market," said Griffey, who batted 311 in 101 games last scason. "It was better than traveling all around the country."

Griffey said he no longer want-ed to play on the artificial turf the Reds have at Riverfront Stadium. Reich added that his client wanted to play for a contender and a team that could afford "a player of his magnitude." Those criteria, Reich said, reduced their target teams to four. The Yankees, Griffey said, were his first choice in the American League, which has more natural grass fields than the National

LONDON - Dieter Hoeness ended a goal drought with a hat trick Wednesday night to lead Bayern Munich of West Germay to a 4-1 home victory over Benfica of Portugal for a quarterfinal berth the European Champions

Soccer Cup.

Benfica, fighting an uphill battle after being held to a scoreless draw in the first leg of its second-round match in Lisbon two weeks ago, was never allowed to settle down. Bayem, cheered on by a crowd of 35,000, took control from the start with Hoeness doing the dam-age. #### Ford is a drawling, good of boy from Gadsden, Ala., who played under Bear Bryani at Alabama and believes, for the most part, in the Bryant doctrines. There is. however, a gentleness to him. When he saw his program collapsing and began to feel heat, the geotleness disappeared and was replaced by anger and paranoia.

"I wasn't prepared to be 6-5," Ford said. "I had coached one year, won eight games and gone to a bowl. I was thinkin', 'Heck, ain't nothin' to coachin'. Nobody ever warned me about what it takes to lose, how to deal with it."

When it was over. Ford sat down and began going over all that had happened. He knew he had made mistakes. He knew he had not been as organized as he should have been. He decided to make some changes. His first move was to hire Tom Harper as his No. 2 man and defensive line coach. Harper, 49, is a coaching gypsy, a man who has worked at six different colleges and in the WFL.

Contrasting Personality

He is as gregarious as Ford is withdrawn; as experienced as Ford is green. He had been at Virginia Tech for six years and was ready to make a move. Harper also brought with him a reputation as a teacher and, along with Ford, he began setting a new tool during spring practice. Players were coached, oot yelled at. To eliminate the daily trepidation of walking toward the practice field oot knowing what to expect, Ford had his staff put together a daily practice schedule, starting Aug. 6 and going right through a possible bowl game. When the players arrived for summer practice, they received a booklet that told them what would happen each day, all season.

Better organized, having learned from the mistakes of 1980, Ford still had one more problem to deal with when he met his team: the NCAA. "You couldn't ignore it," said one staff member. "It was all the kids were talking about when they first got here. We had to face it." Ford faced it by telling his team that the NCAA was out of their control and should be ignored; that it would not affect their chances to have a great season in 1981 and they should approach the season as if oothing at all was Clearly, the situation has oot affected this team's play. From the first day, the Tigers have rolled, easily beating Wolford and Tulane, then upsetting defending na-tional champion Georgia, a team they had almost beaten the year before. This year, there have been oo al-mosts. Kentucky and Virginia were shut out, Duke was routed and N.C. State was beaten - barely -- in the team's worst game of the season. On Saturday, victory No. 8 was an 82-24 annihilation of Wake Forest, and now people are talking about the possibility of Clemson and Pittsburgh matching up in the Fiesta Bowl to decide the national title if Pitt can beat Penn State and if Clemsoo can get by North Carolina, Maryland and South Carolina, each game a very difficult one for the Tigers.

But the possibility is there.

Sorting Out Fanatics

TEW YORK - Mrs. Delia Odorra of Little Rock, Ark. wants someone to straighten her out about fundamentalists, extremists and fanatics. "Am I wrong in thinking that fundamentalists, extremists and fanatics are actually three different breeds of

The distinctions are vividly illuminated by a news story from Schenectady about the troubles of a man named Jordan Clive who did not much care what brand of toothpaste he brushed

Having just moved in from-Pittsburgh, where anything goes when it comes to toothpaste, Clive naturally thought it curious that neighbors encountering him on the street invariably greeted him with "You'll wonder where the yellow went when you brush your teeth with Pepsodent."

Investigating, Clive learned that these were words from an advertising campaign used by Pepsodent toothpaste in the great age of ra-dio. Clive had settled in a neigh-borhood that was a hotbed of Pepsodent fundamentalism.

At first, Clive was amused and took the flippant line by replying to the neighborhood greeting with some equally antique radio adver-tising slogan. When someooe waved and said, "You'll wonder where the yellow went when you brush your teeth with Pepsodent," Clive waved back and cried, "Winston tastes good like a cigarette

The trouble began when he passed the Culbertsons on the sidewalk one day and Mrs. Culbertson nodded and said, "You'll wonder where the yellow went when you brush your teeth with Pepsodent," and Clive replied, "Ipana for the smile of beauty — Sal Hepatica for the smile of

That night, Culbertson called upon Clive and brought two tooth-brushes and a tube of Pepsodent. "Come, let us brush together," said Culbertson.

"You go ahead and brush if you feel like it," Clive said. "I'll just use a little dental floss."

Culbertson was a Pepsodent fundamentalist, but not an extremist. Therefore he did not proceed against Clive, though Clive's manipulation of the dental floss not only disgusted him, but also of-fended his beliefs.

The story soon reached Kinch, who was an extremist. Kinch decided to dramatize the need for a new law that would protect society by putting floss users in jail.

When Clive awoke one night to find six miles of knotted dental floss burning on his lawn, he called the police, who thought it was funny, which so angered Clive that he circulated a petition.

This challenge to Pepsodent en-raged the neighborhood fanatics, who were led by the yoothful stu-dent firebrand Pooch Paladeen.

"It was written by the ancient advertising agents of our grandfa-thers' time that man will wonder where the yellow went when he brushes his teeth with Pepsodent," the youthful Pooch told his fellow fanatics. The words "ancient" and "grandfathers' time" stirred the mass fanatical juices until nothing but maybem seemed worthwhile whereupon they stormed Clive's

Clive resisted as beroically as possible, knocking out three fanat-ics with a family-size tube of Crest and cracking a fourth skull with a well-aimed Water Pik.

The fanatics seized and burned all his tooth-cleaning equipment, including an old toothbrush he used to put polish on his shoes. Dragging Clive into the street, they sat on him while young Pooch tri-umphantly brushed his teeth with Pepsodent.

The neighborhood's fundamentalists were repelled by such brutality, but hoped Clive would emerge from the experience improved by less yellow teeth. The extremists disapproved of the lawlessness of the violence and urged the fanatics to join them in lobbying for a bill to legalize violence.

The fanatics brought a mirror, forced Clive to smile into it while taunting him with cries of "Guess where the yellow went!," then poured through the streets shouting, "We brushed his choppers with Pepsodent."

There you have it, Mrs. Odorra. Some people keep the faith, some people legislate it, and some people sock you in the teeth with it. New York Times Service

Alan Paton: A New Cry for His Land

His First Novel in Three Decades Takes Up Theme of Apartheid Again

By Richard Williams

JOHANNESBURG — Paton, author of one of the most acclaimed novels of modern times and arch-critic of apartheid, has published his first work of fiction in nearly 30

Like his famous "Cry, the Beloved Country," the novel's subject is South Africa's racially divided society, for according to Paton "If you write a novel in South Africa which didn't concern the central issues, it wouldn't be worth reading." The title of the new book, "Ah, but Your Land Is Beautiful," was taken by Paton from people who come to visit him at his home outside Durban. Reluctant to comment on the country's poli-cies when asked what they think of South Africa, they reply: "Ah, but your land is beautiful."

"What they really mean is how can there be so much grief for so many in a country which is so beautiful," Patoo said in a recent

'Cry, the Beloved Country," Patoo's first novel, was written in 1948, the year the mainly Afri-kaner National Party gained power with a mandate from the white electorate to strengthen the country's racial laws.

Racial Problems

One of the first South African books to awaken the world to the country's racial problems, it told the story of a Zulu parsoo and his son who is arrested for the murder of a white man.

Praised by Western critics as being among the best novels of modern times, it woo Paton fame as one of the most trenchant critics of apartheid

"Ah, but Your Land Is Beautiful," is set in the period between 1952 and 1958, when the National Party government was establishing the edifice of apartheid laws that govern relations between the country's white minority and the other racial groups.

Trilogy

It is the first of a planned trilogy covering events from 1952 to 1976 when schoolchildren in city of Soweto rioted aginst an ernment can solve South Africa's education system that in their eyes condemned them to second-class status. The novel sets the historical events of the period against the lives of ordinary people — a black family, an Asian family and a family of English-speaking liberals opposed to spartheid.

Letters to an Aunt

Letters from an Afrikaner civil servant to his self-questioning aunt punctuate the book. The racial problems, but for the civil servant it is the dawn of a golden age for the Afrikaner.

His letters frequently contain enthusiastic references to "Dr. Hendrik," a politician he sees as destined to lead the Afrikaner nation. "Dr. Hendrik," although never named by Paton, is clearly Dr. Hendrik Verwoerd, architect of apartheid, who during the period covered by this book, as minister of Native Affairs, con-

Alan Paton: "Ah, but Your Land Is Beautiful."

Elvis' Doctor Acquitted PEOPLE: Of Overprescribing Drugs

In a crowded Memphis court-room, Dr. George Nichopoulos, 54, was acquitted of 11 counts of criminally overprescribing addictive drugs to Eivis Presley, country-western singer Jerry Lee Lewis and seven other patients. The jury "Ah, but Your Land Is Beautiful" ends with "Dr. Hendrik" becoming prime minister, setting of six men and six women deliberthe scene for the second part of ated just over three hours before reaching the unanimous verdict for the trilogy, which Paton is tentatively thinking of calling "A New Heaven and a New Earth." the acquittal on all counts. In three weeks of testimony, the prosecu-tors showed that Dr. Nichopoulos "That is definitely what Verwoord and the National Party prescribed more than 19,000 doses of narcotics, sedatives and stimu-lants to Presley in the 31½ months felt they were creating. his previous covel, "Too Late the Phalarope," appeared in 1953.

But last year he published the first half of his autobiography "Towards the Mountain," which takes his story up to 1948, when the publication of "Cry, the Beloved Country" transformed his life. It is a project he intends to continue after completing his fictional trilogy.

Despite no longer taking an active part in politics, Alan Paton still sounds a note of cautious optimism for the future of the country he so deeply loves. In a recent newspaper interview, he said: "I don't see a way out of our present political di-lemma. But I am not prepared to say there isn't one.
